The Daily News.

HONGKONG, DECEMBER 20TH, 1894.

The last batch of reviews and papers from England contain a number of articles, more or less interesting, on the progress of the war between China and Japan. One by Colonel KNOLLS, R.A., in Blackwood's, calls for little comment. There is not much original information in it, nor is it distinguished by any, new or striking argument. Most foreigners in the Far East will agree with the gallant officer's estimate of Chinese military strength, and in the main his conclusions are sound enough. "China's Reputation Bubble" has been often prickly, however, by Japan, and, thanks to the efforts of various writers, the oil is definitely foamed and built up by men like Sir HALLIDAY MACARTNEY and Capt. LANG, R.N., that China is awakening from her long sleep, and will, so long as day by a great Power, be fast disappearing. That there are still some believers in this, they may be gathered from the appearance of a paper in the Nineteenth Century from the pen of Mr. DEMERIUS BOUILLER, entitled "The Korean Crisis," which further purports to be a word for China. Mr. BOUILLER is the author of a bulky history of China, and France is treated by Mr. BOUILLER as the ravings of a madman, but although it is out of the pale of probabilities, it is not made so, we think, than the historian's own prediction that in the event of England acting as bully to Japan, according to his immoral suggestion, Russia will take up the part and help to prosecute the dominions of the Son of Heaven. Happily for all parties, paper theorists like Mr. BOUILLER have not the moulding of the policy of the great Powers. It is refreshing to turn from the farce of nonsense induced by this learned pelican to the common-sense and we believe really present view taken by that experienced Chinaman, Sir THOMAS WADE, of the present situation, of which more anon.

Miss Elsie Adair has returned to Hongkong to her home in the States, quite recovered from her severe indisposition and looking more charming than ever. The doctors refused to allow her to proceed through India, and in consequence will have an opportunity of being right of being delighted with the mystic and wonderful scenes there.

The following is the programme of Mr. Sanger's Great Benefit on Monday next, to commence at 5.45 p.m. Evening at 5.30. Selections from the "Crazeads," "Nida Gode," "Water Music," "Pilgrim's March," "Dance Gothic," "Dance, horn by Cesarini Bohemi," 1769, died 1812. A pianist of the highest rank! March Soliloquy, "Gounod," "Gounod," "Benefit," "Gounod," "Mackenzie" (from the Violin & Violine Fences). "Beresford," "The Queen," "The Queen," "Zedek the Priest," "The Queen," "Handel" (From the "Concerto-Antro.") "Christmas Carol" being sung by the Cathedral Choir.

The Offering will be in aid of the Almshouse Fund and towards a sum of contemplated repair to the Organ by the Organ Builders.

We have to acknowledge receipt of a parcel of Cassell's monthly magazine, "The National Magazine of Art," a good new volume which is very attractive indeed. There is a beautiful photogravure entitled "Woolton," by Professor C. W. Wood, which is well worth framing and a striking "The Vale of Avon," by F. Walker, A.R.P.E. The letter-press is interesting and a paper on "Art in the Ballet" by C. W. Wood, will be appreciated by all those interested in the art of the stage. Among Mr. Wilson's writings, however, I remember the conventional brief epistles of the Italian ballet school and read with interest the notes of the author on the "Art of the Stage," which is a good book.

Misses Daisie, Grindieh & Co., Limited, have recently made changes and improvements in their shop, and it is now a brightly lighted and pleasant place in which to purchase anything in the retail druggist line. They have an extensive supply of all kinds of photographic supplies and chemicals, the Kodak dry plates, the best makes. They are a specialty of tuning elegant toilet articles, and the latest novelties in druggist's sundries.

When Mr. Boulous, quitting the office of adviser, assumes the role of the prophet, he becomes ridiculous. Faith in one's hobby may be a good thing, but it should not, even in a historian, be carried to the point of infatuation. But Mr. Boulous, after having, to his own great satisfaction, reduced the Japanese to Peking to the dimensions of a moderate, military success which had been grossly magnified by the unprincipled representatives of the Press, goes on to expatiate on the inability of the Japanese to follow up that success, and expresses the conviction that if the combatants are allowed to fight out to the bitter end a long and exhausting struggle China is certain to triumph in the end. He then proceeds to criticize the military operations of the Japanese and say what they ought to have accomplished. Could he but have foreseen! Almost before the ink was dry with which his article was printed, Port Arthur, the greatest stronghold in Eastern Asia, one of the strongest positions in the world, had fallen before the skilfully planned and ably executed attack of the despised Japanese! Alas for the presence of the prophet historian.

The rest of Mr. Boulous's paper is taken up with an attempt to show that England is the natural ally of China; that she has nothing to gain by supporting Japan, and should therefore bid for China's favour; and that if she fails to do so Russia will not neglect the golden opportunity and will assuredly throw her influence into the scale for China, and receive her reward concessions in the Pamirs in the Amoor region, and an open port south of the Tiansin. The old fallacy that Great Britain should enter into alliance with the effete and semi-barbarous Government of Peking in order to maintain her Indian empire intact is urged by Mr. Boulous with as much earnestness as though the goodwill of China were essential to the very existence of our power in Asia. He says—"Moreover, an alliance with China means tranquillity without an effort on our part on three-fourths of the whole of the land frontier of India. If we alienate the goodwill of the Chinese, which has been steadily if slowly increasing towards us for some years past, that traitor will cease to exist, and with it will also depart the hopes of tapping the trade of interior China. We can retain and strengthen it by showing the Chinese Government that it need not make stupendous sacrifices to Russia to obtain an ally against Japan, and our diplomatic skill must have much deteriorated if, with a dominating fleet at its back in Eastern waters, it cannot bring such pressure to bear at Tokyo during the winter that the Japanese will listen to reasonable terms of peace based on their military evacuation of Korea and abandoning the attempt to "humiliate China." Mr. Boulous has yet to be disillusioned. The fall of Port Arthur can hardly be expected to open his eyes, but his conversion will possibly commence with the capture of Peking, though even such a disaster would not comprehend of the hopeless despatch, not of China, but of the system under which she has sprung, has grown up, and its certain dissolution when brought into actual collision with the forces of Occidental civilization. The historian's references to Russia even are not happy or up to date. Russian policy in Eastern Asia has, there is every reason to believe, undergone a change. It is now asserted that, although she is determined not to allow the annexation of Korea by Japan, she has no intention of acquiring a port in the peninsula inasmuch as while it contains plenty of good harbours there is not one that could be rendered impregnable to attack, or as strong as Vladivostok. Moreover, on the authority of Mr. de BLOWIZ, the Czar NICHOLAS II, is imbued with the notion that England and Russia should form an alliance to prevent aggression by the Asiatic Powers. The suggestion of the Newest for the partition of China by Russia, England, and France is treated by Mr. Boulous as the ravings of a madman, but although it is out of the pale of probabilities, it is not made so, we think, than the historian's own prediction that in the event of England acting as bully to Japan, according to his immoral suggestion, Russia will take up the part and help to prosecute the dominions of the Son of Heaven. Happily for all parties, paper theorists like Mr. Boulous have not the moulding of the policy of the great Powers. It is refreshing to turn from the farce of nonsense induced by this learned pelican to the common-sense and we believe really present view taken by that experienced Chinaman, Sir THOMAS WADE, of the present situation, of which more anon.

Misses E. Wilson & Co., music business daily increase. Their agents travel from Singapore to the Far East, and the firm of Messrs. E. Wilson & Co., Ltd., have a large list of contracts and purchases made one unopposed at the growth of musical taste and study in the Colony.

Measures Kelly & Walsh's store is an unfailing attraction. Here we come in touch in a measure, with the intellectual action of the world, with its strength and that of this well known firm is no exception. Besides the large assortment of prints of every description there now display a great variety of attractive holiday goods, embracing photographic albums, writing cases, cigar and cigarette cases, inkstands, exceptionally fine card cases, and many other articles. An application for permission to construct water closets.

Application from Assistant Surveyor is to be allowed to make trials of private architectural works.

Minority reward for work done 1st December, 1894.

PRISONERS' STATEMENTS.

We understand our report of what was said in the House of Commons on Tuesday in reference to prisoners' statements does not exactly present the point at issue.

When a prisoner is taken to the bar, he is formally charged so that he may know the offence entered on the charge sheet, and he is then cautioned that he need say nothing unless he wishes, but if he does make a statement it will be written down and if he makes a statement in writing it is done in his presence.

Mr. Rattoone's "we supply anything you want in the household line, a library of prints and everything is so good and tempting that it is difficult to pass by the door without going in and purchasing something, even if you do not do a cent."

A Bill was introduced for the young men of Réunion to volunteer for service in Madagascar.

Meers, J. Uhlmann & Co.'s show cases are filled with beautiful goods. Excellent taste has been shown in all selections and the variety is really astonishing. There are objects of all kinds from those costing thousands of dollars to those costing a few cents, and ingenious children's toys performing all kinds of queer actions.

Mr. G. L. Lamont supplies a great lot of goods at rates below his competitors and those that he has said will always show a good profit.

When a prisoner is taken to the bar, he is formally charged so that he may know the offence entered on the charge sheet, and he is then cautioned that he need say nothing unless he wishes, but if he does make a statement it will be written down. Formerly it was written in English, so the English translation was given only. Sir Fielding Clark, pained at this that was objected in his Chinese statement, said that this was an object in his Chinese statement, and those that he has said will always show a good profit.
